FIGHT TO THE TWITTER END

Bryan Colangelo deflected responsibility for the Twitter scandal that finally led to his departure Thursday as Sixers GM, instead placing the blame on his wife for her 'misguided effort.' 18

WELCOME TO METRO PHILLY

Collargate has officially come to an end! Philadelphia 76ers president of basketball operations Bryan Colangelo immediately resigned on Thursday, after an independent investigation found that his wife was using multiple Twitter burner accounts to criticize the organization. Colangelo was supposed to lead the Sixers into a pivotal offseason, but that will not happen now. Over the next few weeks, Sixers ownership and head coach Brett Brown will try to fill the void as they move on from this unfortunate situation. For more, see page 18 and metro.us.

1 NASA ROVER SHOWS MARS HAS LIFE INGREDIENTS

A NASA rover has detected a bonanza of organic compounds on the surface of Mars and seasonal fluctuations of atmospheric methane in findings released on Thursday that mark some of the strongest evidence ever that Earth's neighbor may have harbored life. But National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientists emphasized there could be nonbiological explanations for both discoveries made by the Curiosity rover at a site called Gale crater, leaving the issue of Martian life a tantalizing but unanswered question. Three different types of organic molecules were discovered when the rover dug just 2 inches into roughly 3.5 billion-year-old mudstone, a fine-grained sedimentary rock, at Gale crater, apparently the site of a large lake when ancient Mars was warmer and wetter than the desolate planet it is today. Curiosity also measured an unexpectedly large seasonal cycle in the low levels of atmospheric methane. About 95 percent of the methane in Earth's atmosphere is produced from biological activity, though the scientists said it is too soon to know if the Martian methane also is related to life.

2 UBER DRIVER CHARGED WITH MURDER IN DENVER

A Denver-area driver with the ride-sharing service Uber who police say fatally shot a passenger in his vehicle was charged on Thursday with first-degree murder, prosecutors said. Michael Andre Hancock, 29, who has been held without bond in the shooting death of Hyun Kim, 45, is charged with one count of murder after deliberation, the Denver District Attorney's Office said in a statement. Hancock's first court appearance to hear the charge has not been set, the prosecutor's office said, and it was unclear if he has retained or been appointed legal counsel. According to a Denver police probable cause affidavit, a motorist who came on the scene in the early morning hours of last Friday said Hancock told him he had shot Kim after the passenger attacked him. The case has renewed criticism of San Francisco-based Uber Technologies Inc., which is facing a class-action lawsuit over the company's vetting of its contract drivers. Uber said in a statement it was "deeply troubled" by the arrest of Hancock, who had worked for the service for almost three years, and that it was cooperating with Denver police.

Ben Fogle stands in front of a giant wave of plastic waste collected from Holywell beach by the U.K.'s Marine Conservation Society. The total weight of the heap, seen Thursday on Old Street in London, is 2,600 pounds and includes 10,000 pieces of plastic — representing the amount of marine plastic pollution found on the beach every 2 miles in the U.K. The public can contribute to the visual masterpiece by dropping off their own plastic waste at the site of the billboard.

4 TRUMP DANGLES PROSPECT OF KIM US VISIT

President Donald Trump on Thursday held out the prospect of inviting North Korean leader Kim Jong Un to the White House if he deemed next week's summit a success while also signaling he was willing to walk away if he thought talks did not go well. At a White House news conference with Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe, Trump also repeated what he said last week that it was possible he and Kim could sign an agreement to end the 1950-53 Korean War, which was concluded only with a truce, not a peace treaty. "We could sign an agreement, as you know that would be a first step.... We're looking at it, we're talking about it with a lot of other people," Trump told reporters. "That's probably the easy part. The hard part remains after that." Trump added that he hoped someday U.S. relations with Kim's secretive Pyongyang government could be normalized. The main issue for the June 12 summit in Singapore is the U.S. demand for North Korea to abandon a nuclear weapons program that now threatens the United States.

5 CROSSFIT CANS EXEC WHO BASHED LBGTQ EVENT

Russell Berger is looking for a new job after a series of tweets compared a LGBTQ Pride workout to a sin. "As someone who personally believes celebrating 'pride' is a sin, I'd like to personally encourage #CrossFitInfiltrate for standing by their convictions and refusing to host an @indypride workout," Berger wrote in a series of now-deleted tweets. The former chief knowledge officer was referring to an event at an Indianapolis, Indiana, CrossFit gym. The event — organized by the gym's trainers — was meant to celebrate LGBTQ Pride month and the Indy Pride celebration set for this weekend. CrossFit Infiltrate ordered the organizing trainers to cancel the event, leading to a revolt among members. "[Berger] needs to take a big dose of 'shut the f— up' and hide out for awhile. It's sad," CrossFit founder and CEO Greg Glassman told BuzzFeed. "We do so much good work with such pure hearts — to have some zealot in his off time do something this stupid, we're all upset. The whole company is upset." CrossFit Infiltrate, the gym at the center of the controversy, is now permanently closed. MEAGAN MORRIS

Lincoln Drive announces new road closures for $12 million renovation

One of the city's busiest pothole-plagued thoroughfares is gearing up for a facelift.

SAM NEWHOUSE
sam.newhouse@metro.us

$12M

New traffic detours are taking effect June 11 as part of a $12 million renovation project now underway that will last through the end of 2019.

"For the majority of the project, two inbound lanes will be maintained for the morning peak-hour traffic and two outbound lanes will be maintained during the evening peak hour traffic."

The Streets Department

Lincoln Drive, loaded with potholes and rampant speeding on its 25 mph, four-lane route winding through Northwest Philadelphia before connecting to the suburbs, is one of Philadelphia's most-used roads, and also one of its most harrowing for out-of-towners to drive.

But now traffic on Lincoln Drive, also known as "Dead Man's Gulch," is going to get a bit stickier. New traffic detours are taking effect June 11 as part of a $12 million renovation project now underway that will last through the end of 2019.

The Lincoln Drive Restoration Project is set to accomplish numerous goals, according to the Streets Department. The badly battered road will get milled and resurfaced, the guide rail and median barrier will be replaced and drainage improvements will be made.

Additionally, a retaining wall north of Forbidden Drive will get a new architectural finish. Pedestrian upgrades including new ADA-friendly curb ramps, and some new asphalt paths near Lincoln Drive and Wissahickon Avenue between Lincoln Drive and Rittenhouse Street. There will also be new traffic-signal masts and arms and a new sewer drain.

Lincoln Drive from Ridge Avenue to Wayne Avenue have already been entirely closed to traffic nights from 9 p.m. to 6 a.m. as part of the project. Motorists are directed to detour on Walnut Lane and Ridge Avenue.

Starting June 11, Lincoln from Wayne to Wissahickon Avenues will be converted into "temporary, single lane closures" due to construction during off-peak hours, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The city is trying to keep as many lanes as possible for rush hour drivers heading to and from Center City.

"For the majority of the project, two inbound lanes will be maintained for the morning peak hour traffic and two outbound lanes will be maintained during the evening peak hour traffic," the Streets Department said.

The project is getting 80 percent of its funding from the federal government and 20 percent from city funds.

Does it do enough?

The Lincoln Drive restoration plan has attracted some criticism by urbanists who say it doesn't go far enough and more should be done to slow traffic on a road that has seen seven severe accidents and four fatalities in the last five years.

"Repaving Lincoln Drive with no plan for serious design changes is like putting a Band-Aid on an open gash," said Dena Driscoll, co-chair of 5th Square, a reform-minded Philly political action committee.

Fifth Square said the accident-prone road needs more significant changes — like going permanently down from four to two lanes to prevent excessive speeding and passing.

Louis Kennedy, 40, is wanted by police for an attacking Robert Pollock Elementary School's principal during Fun Day. PPD

Parents attack Northeast Philly school principal during 'Fun Day'

Controversial Robert Pollock Elementary School principal allegedly attacked by irate parents during year-end event.

sam.newhouse@metro.us

Philadelphia police have arrested a student's mother who allegedly attacked the principal during a school event and are seeking her father for his role in the fight, which the School District said was "not acceptable."

The punch-up occurred around 12:30 p.m. June 6 during the annual Fun Day at Robert Pollock Elementary School in Northeast Philadelphia.

Nichole Myers, 37, of the 9600 block of Ashton Road, was charged with aggravated assault for her role in the incident (per state law, attacks on school employees are automatically charged as aggravated assault). Louis Kennedy, 40, of the 2700 block of North 13th Street, was still being sought by police at press time.

Police said Myers and Kennedy came to the school and entered the schoolyard to take their student out when the first victim, identified as a vice principal at the school, tried to stop them and asked them to sign out the student, per school protocol.

Myers allegedly pushed and shoved the vice principal while cursing and refusing to go to the office, according to the police report, before the school's principal arrived, whom she allegedly cut by punching in the face. The two struggled "as he attempted to defend himself and the two fell to the ground," a police report stated. At that point, Kennedy allegedly joined the fight and punched the principal five to six times in the back of the head before he and Myers fled to a car and drove off.

"The School District of Philadelphia is committed to the safety and welfare of its students and staff," a school-district spokesman said via email. "The assault on two respected administrators is not acceptable and cannot be tolerated. Parents are our primary partners in the education of their children, and that is why we work to ensure their respectful engagement in schools. While we can have differences, physical assaults will not be allowed. We are actively pursuing this matter with public safety authorities and fully cooperating with the investigations."

"The assault on two respected administrators is not acceptable and cannot be tolerated."
School district spokesman

The incident comes after heightened tensions in the Robert Pollock Elementary community. Some parents have complained about a drop in extracurricular programs, while claiming behavioral incidents have increased in the school in recent years. Others heavily criticized the administration over subjects including the school's administrators not using a Philadelphia police officer's donation of iPads intended for autistic students, which were later returned. But there is no indication those complaints were in any way related to the assault.

City to pay $10 million to Philly man wrongly jailed for 25 years

Anthony Wright was acquitted in 2016 in less than an hour of a 1991 rape-murder of a Nicetown woman.

"I am encouraged that the city of Philadelphia will continue to take steps to make sure that what happened to me never happens to my grandchildren or any other child."
Anthony Wright

SAM NEWHOUSE

A Philly man who spent 25 years in jail for rape and murder charges and was exonerated by DNA evidence will receive the largest wrongful conviction settlement in Philadelphia history.

"Although I will never get over the 25 years I spent in prison for crimes I did not commit, or missing time with my mother before she died or with my son the whole time he was growing up, I am relieved that I can now get on with my life," said Anthony Wright in a statement. "For the sake of my young grandchildren, I am encouraged that the city of Philadelphia will continue to take steps to make sure that what happened to me never happens to my grandchildren or any other child."

Wright was ordered a new trial in 2014 after a DNA test of the rape kit preserved from the 1991 rape and murder of 77-year-old Nicetown resident Louise Talley tested positive for the DNA of Ronnie Byrd, a man who had been squatting in an abandoned home near the area at the time of the murder and died in 2013 while incarcerated in South Carolina.

After being arrested, Wright confessed to the rape and murder of Talley. But he later recanted his confession, testifying at his own trial that it was coerced by detectives and that officers planted the bloody clothes in his home.

Wright remained in custody until a retrial in 2016, at which the Philly DA's office argued that he was Byrd's accomplice. But a jury acquitted Wright in less than an hour, freeing him after 25 years.

Mayor Jim Kenney said he was "pleased" with the settlement.

"This is a fair agreement for both parties," Kenney said in a statement on the settlement. "Mr. Wright has shown great dignity throughout this process, and I hope this resolution assists him and his family after what they have been through. This is a tragic case and part of the reason why this administration remains steadfast in its commitment to ensuring all people in our city receive fair treatment in our criminal justice system."

GETTY IMAGES

Attorneys representing Wright called the case emblematic of racial unfairness in the justice system and asked for cases involving the officers who arrested Wright to be reviewed. While the settlement does not include an admission of liability by the city of Philadelphia, leaders said law enforcement has instituted reforms to prevent cases like this from happening again.

"The Philadelphia Police Department has seen tremendous reforms since the time of Mr. Wright's incarceration," Commissioner Richard Ross said in a statement. "Today, the PPD is committed to protecting and upholding civil rights in our city, which is why we continually find ways to improve police strategies and techniques consistent with best practices. In addition to improving police practices, the PPD remains committed to conducting fair and thorough investigations of any crime. This is evident by the numerous advancements undertaken by the PPD in the area of forensic science, along with investigative and interrogation procedures, which includes the videotaping of interrogations."

The city will pay out the settlement in three installments over the next 14 months.

Clinton talks new thriller, not old scandals during Philly visit

Ex-president Bill Clinton and author James Patterson avoided the subject of scandal while promoting their book in Philly.

A.D. AMOROSI
letters@metro.us

The steps and patio setting of Irvine Auditorium on Wednesday night were surprisingly quiet. What was expected to be an event worthy of a #MeToo protest — a visit from former President Bill Clinton and best-selling author James Patterson, celebrating their collaborative novel "The President is Missing" — was calm and without incident.

During the soldout hourlong conversation between the two authors and moderator Lee Child (renowned author of the "Jack Reacher" series) co-sponsored by the Free Library of Philadelphia, Clinton and "Alex Cross" creator Patterson claimed that cybersecurity was this nation's greatest threat. "We decided [to write] on cybersecurity before the 2016 election," said Clinton, referring to the troubles with Russia and possible voting booth meddling that plagued the race between his then-candidate wife, Hillary Clinton, and now-President Donald, J. Trump.

"I'm just an old dog learning a new trick."

Former President Bill Clinton

Most of the audience left Irvine Auditorium happy and smiling with their signed copies of "The President Is Missing."

But some were not pleased at Clinton's appearance.

"At this point, people would have a lot more respect for Clinton if he just owned up to what he did and apologized," said Ellen Tiberino, a West Philadelphia sculptor-artist who has marched for the #MeToo movement. "As for the book, I wish he would go away. Him and Hilary. I hope she doesn't make any moves with the DNC. She stole the last election from Bernie [Sanders]. I hate this 'superstar-politician' thing. He's just filling his coffers. He should do something more worthwhile."

But the absence of more visible protests during the talk was surprising after Clinton told NBC News anchor Craig Melvin on Sunday (and Monday's "Today" show), that he did not owe a personal apology to Monica Lewinsky, the White House intern with whom he had an affair during the time of his presidency, when she was in her early 20s.

Former President Bill Clinton speaks onstage during a discussion of his new book co-written with author James Patterson, "The President Is Missing," at University of Pennsylvania on Wednesday. GETTY IMAGES

For his action, Clinton was impeached by the U.S. House of Representatives in December 1998 for obstruction of justice and perjury related to his relationship with Lewinsky, but survived the trial in the Senate. "I don't think it would be an issue [today] because people would be using the facts instead of the imagined facts," Clinton said during the NBC interview.

Since then, Clinton has been branded as insensitive to all things #MeToo, even though by Tuesday night, and an on appearance on CBS's "The Late Show" with Stephen Colbert, the ex-prez added that "it wasn't my finest hour. … I was mad at me — not for the first time," in response to questions about tone deafness to the #MeToo movement.

US immigration authorities sending 1,600 detainees to federal prisons

GETTY IMAGES

U.S. authorities are transferring into federal prisons about 1,600 Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) detainees, officials told Reuters on Thursday. It's the first large-scale use of federal prisons to hold detainees amid a Trump administration crackdown on people entering the country illegally.

An ICE spokeswoman told Reuters five federal prisons will temporarily take in detainees awaiting civil immigration court hearings, including potential asylum seekers, with one prison in Victorville, California, preparing to house 1,000 people.

Officials of a prison employees' union said the influx of ICE detainees raises questions about prison staffing and safety.

Union leaders at prisons in California, Texas and Washington state who spoke to Reuters said they had little time to prepare for the large intake of detainees.

At Victorville, the prison getting the largest number of people, workers are moving about 500 inmates in a medium-security facility to make space, said John Kostelnik, local president for the American Federation of Government Employees Council of Prison Locals union.

"There is so much movement going on," said Kostelnik. "Everyone is running around like a chicken without their head."

ICE spokeswoman Dani Bennett said, "U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement is working to meet the demand for additional immigration detention space, both long and short term" due to a surge in illegal border crossings and a U.S. Department of Justice zero-tolerance policy. REUTERS

Grumble Editor

All right, people — here are our last Grumbles of the week. I'd say we are going into the weekend with some of our best ones yet. Remember to keep sending them in and we'll publish them. This is your time at the microphone!

WOMEN MAKING A MESS IN THE BATHROOMS AT WORK!
I want to grumble about the women at work who leave tendrils of hair in the sink. EEUUWW. Wash it down or wipe it up with a paper towel. And while I'm grumbling about bathroom etiquette, let's also mention the ladies who leave tinkles on the seat. Again, wipe it up! This behavior is obviously an extension of their at-home messiness.
- Allison Forde, Metro US reader

TOO MUCH PERFUME ON PUBLIC TRANSIT!
Who says "Let me douse myself in horrid perfume right before I get on public transit"? The lady next to me on the train, that's who. Nose burning, eyes watering, headache-forming type of stank. I should have asked her where she got such a God-awful scent so I can get some to use as chemical warfare. But I kept my mouth shut, which wasn't easy because I was trying not to breath through my nose.
- Robin Wagner, Metro Philly reader and commuter

Did someone leave their sweater in the sink? ISTOCK

STOP TAKING UP TABLES WHEN YOU DON'T DESERVE THEM!
Please don't sit at a table when a bench will do! My husband & I meet for lunch almost every day and love to enjoy our food in one of the beautiful parks in Center City. BUT there are too many ignorant people reading books, looking at their phones or just taking in the sites at a TABLE when a chair, a wall, the grass or a bench would suffice! I would like to eat my sandwich or salad or soup or whatever at a table like a civilized human! Please be aware that others only get an hour to enjoy the great outdoors and eat their lunch.

Aries Keep busy. A physical challenge will help you blow off steam and keep you from doing or saying something you shouldn't. Bide your time and gather information.

Taurus Resolve uncertainty and move forward with enthusiasm. Personal gains can be made if you are willing to put in the time and effort. Romance is on the rise.

Gemini You'll be faced with mixed emotions that are bound to make you think twice when it comes to how much you do for others. Listen to what's being asked for, but only offer what's fair.

Cancer Emotional problems will surface when dealing with decisions that include other people. Partnerships must be handled with care to avoid a misunderstanding.

Leo A short trip will do you good and will encourage you to make a decision that you've been contemplating. If you are uncertain, ask someone you trust to offer suggestions.

Virgo Keep plugging away at whatever it is you must accomplish. Hard work will pay off, and the time it takes to apply extra detail will not be wasted. Follow your instincts.

Libra Channel your energy into home and personal improvements. Gather information to ensure that you have answers ready for anyone who offers criticism or derogatory remarks.

Scorpio Look at the big picture, but don't buy into something you cannot afford. Set your sights on what's realistic and doable. A personal improvement or romantic encounter looks inviting.

Sagittarius Discuss your intentions with someone who will be influenced by the decisions you make. Getting the go-ahead will make your plans easier to achieve. Home improvement is favored.

Capricorn Listen carefully and look for a way to deal with friends and relatives without upsetting someone you care about. Don't make changes without getting approval first.

Aquarius Clear the air. If you want someone to do something, you have to be blunt about what you want. Find out where you stand, and do what's necessary.

Pisces Not everyone will see things the same way you do. Take a wait-and-see approach when dealing with matters that can influence your reputation or affect your position. EUGENIA LAST

Summer Fridays: Patty Jackson

The 105.3 host is looking forward to live music at the Dell, water ice and the Odunde Festival.

JENNIFER LOGUE
jennifer.logue@metro.us

- Name: Patty Jackson
- Age: 54
- Neighborhood: South Philly
- Occupation: Midday announcer and entertainment reporter at 105.3 WDAS FM

Patty Jackson, aka Ms. Patty, is a 35-year radio veteran who hosts the midday Cafe 105 program and 4-1-1 feature on 105.3 WDAS FM, which are staples for adult listeners in the Philadelphia region. While Jackson keeps busy with additional media pursuits as well as taking part in various community events, she still finds time to enjoy summer in Philly. Here are a few things she's looking forward to.

What do you love most about Philly in the summer?

Hosting the summer concert series at the Dell Music Center. There are so many music stars that are joining us — Patti LaBelle, Kool and the Gang, Gregory Porter and Charlie Wilson, to name a few. The Dell Music Center is an outdoor concert venue at 33rd and Ridge, and it is a staple of the city. People come out to celebrate summer with family, friends and great music. I am also celebrating my 35th anniversary in radio with a concert Sunday Sept. 2, with Philly's own Frankie Beverly and Maze and the Whispers.

Best way to keep cool?

Hanging out on Belmont Plateau with water ice!

Best thing to eat?

Hand-rolled ice cream. I love Seventh Heaven in the Rittenhouse Square area. They also have great milkshakes — I am a milkshake connoisseur.

Best way to spend a free day?

Hanging out in the newly renovated LOVE Park — I love the food trucks.

Favorite outdoor event?

Odunde the festival at 23rd and South. It is in its 43rd year, and growing up in South Philly, you show up for the food, vendors, music and, of course, the people.

Best place to hang with friends?

South Street it is still the hippest place in town.

Best summer memory in Philly?

Spending the day on the Parkway when WDAS Radio hosted the annual Unity Day Festival. This event was the centerpiece of the city on the Parkway for over 25 years.

Actors trade role as the villain in this Philadelphia Artists' Collective play

Love, revenge, gypsy curses and murder make "Maria Marten, or The Murder in the Red Barn" a Victorian melodrama of the highest caliber. As if the play's plot features aren't dramatic enough, the Philadelphia Artists' Collective is adding even more fuel to the fire by having two actors take turns playing the villain — Dan Hodge and Damon Bonetti. The pair also co-founded Philadelphia Artists' Collective, coincidentally.

"Dan originally found this play and has been sitting on it for a while," says director, Charlotte Northeast. "I read the script and loved it — and I knew he wanted to play the villain. I then knew that Damon would want to play the villain. I couldn't of course have our two founders audition for the role. The idea then came to me to have them both play the villain. They both would have to learn two roles, and this really gives them the opportunity to show off their talents. This is only the second time they have both been on stage together in the same play."

"Maria Marten, or the Murder in the Red Barn" is based off of a real 1827 murder that took place in the village of Polstead in Suffolk, England. Maria Marten (played by Victoria Goins) is said to have been shot dead by a former lover, William Corder, who will be played by both Hodge and Bonetti, as previously noted.

"My challenge in directing is to find how a modern audience will view the over-the-top notions in the script," Northeast says. "I want to embrace that world and break the fourth wall to make the show accessible to the audience. But I want to also acknowledge the ridiculousness of the situations on stage. We will have a live piano player serve as the guide for the show and give the audience agency to boo, hiss and things audiences in the 1880s used to do naturally. Listen for the music to get fast or slow to add to the tension and enhance the drama."

"Maria Marten, or the Murder in the Red Barn" will run through June 24.

'Ocean's 8' is a fun flick with attitude, comedy and style

The crime movie, starring an octet led by Sandra Bullock and Cate Blanchett, is more than just another action movie. It shows a group of women working together as a team escaping from stereotypes. DIEGO RAMMSY / MWN

Meet the new "Ocean's" gang. ALL PHOTOS BARRY WETCHER/WARNER BROS.

At first glance, the "Oceans' 8" project, a film from the franchise that director Steven Soderbergh made popular with the "Ocean's Eleven," "Ocean's Twelve" and "Ocean's Thirteen" trilogy, seemed nothing more than a female version of the original.

"When they told me the idea for the first time, I honestly did not know if it would work, I thought it was fun but I did not think it would be feasible," admits Sandra Bullock at the film's opening.

"Ocean's 8" brings together a team of female talents so strong and diverse that it turns what would be a standard action movie into a crime comedy with as many nuances as its expressive characters allow.

After spending five years, eight months and 12 days inside her cell planning what could be her final hit, Debbie (Sandra Bullock), sister of George Clooney's Danny Ocean, brings together a gang to steal a $150 million diamond necklace during the annual Met Gala in New York.

"But what this movie really is about is these eight wonderfully complex, intelligent and funny women, who will take you on their own journey and in all the twists and turns that will come," explains Bullock at the same Met, the place conveniently chosen for part of the cast to talk about the premiere.

Cate Blanchett plays Lou, a rebellious, determined and tough woman who will become Debbie's right hand in this difficult mission.

"Once I found out who the other women were going to be and knowing the franchise we were going to be a part of, I felt it would be a fun and great thing to do, and it's a risk but it was worth it," the actress acknowledges.

The rest of the gang is made up by fashion designer Rose Weil (Helena Bonham Carter), celebrity Daphne Kluger (Anne Hathaway), expert jeweler Amita (Mindy Kaling), housewife Tammy (Sarah Paulson), hacker Nine Ball (Rihanna) and the street pickpocket Constance "Ocean's 8" opens in theaters June 8.

(Awkwafina).

Far from conventional

The film has a very prominent cast, which could only have happened thanks to a story that escapes conventional standards and is not satisfied with simply portraying minorities, but digs into very defined characters that narrate a crime comedy.

"We had a director [Gary Ross] who really loves women and who proposed a story in which they could do their thing, which is fantastic," adds Blanchett, because, this film has its own identity with complex characters.

"We cannot underestimate the power of visual representation and it is not that we are telling an 8-year-old girl to become a criminal, but that she can do what she really wants to do and that there is space for everyone," says Anne Hathaway.

According to Bullock, much of the result is due to the chemistry that the cast achieved while shooting.

"We had the opportunity to connect and share," she says. "We worked long hours, but once we lowered our guard and realized that we were among friends, we were able to connect with each other, because you usually do not have the opportunity to work with a group of women in a movie."

"What this movie really is about is these eight wonderfully complex, intelligent and funny women, who will take you on their own journey."

Sandra Bullock

And just as its main character reflects, the film does not fall short on the issue of gender equality. "Women taking care of each other and working as a team, giving space to the most talented in each task and not fighting over some nonsense but fighting for a common good, for me, this is the real world, we are showing a lot of love and support and I think this will help with equality," Bullock says.

A very New York film

The Metropolitan Museum of Art on Fifth Avenue sits on the edge of Central Park and covers four full blocks. It's the U.S.'s largest museum. It allowed scenes of "Ocean's 8" to be shot inside for two weeks. The film also takes place in other parts of the Big Apple, so shots took place in several locations, including the Cartier Mansion; the annex of the Bushwick United Methodist Church; the Plaza Hotel; Christie's at Rockefeller Plaza; The Pierre Hotel; Casa Lever, a restaurant in the iconic Lever House on Park Avenue; Bergdorf Goodman department store; and the 52-story tower of the New York Times.

"New York has its own energy," says Bullock. "It lights something in you and keeps you alert."

Binge This Now: Why you should watch Netflix's 'Sense8'

The fan-favorite sci-fi series is coming to an end.

ANDREW HUSBAND
letters@metro.us

The "Sense8" finale debuts on Netflix Friday. SEGOLENE LAGNY / NETFLIX

Less than a month after Netflix canceled its globe-trotting science fiction series "Sense8" on June 1, 2017, co-creator Lana Wachowski revealed a finale was in the works. In a letter addressed to the show's devoted fanbase, she wrote, "There will be another two-hour special released next year." The news came after an intense social media campaign that peppered Netflix with #RenewSense8 and other hashtags, and now the promised finale is finally here.

What's it about?

What creators Lana and Lilly Wachowski ("The Matrix") and J. Michael Straczynski ("Babylon 5") have accomplished storywise with "Sense8" is complex, but not unintelligible. Eight disparate people from around the globe suddenly discover they are psychically and emotionally connected to one another in a cluster of "sensates." As a result, they can not only communicate with each other, but they can also share their memories, knowledge, skills and languages whenever the need arises.

After a sensate from another cluster named Angel (Daryl Hannah) activates these eight before her death, one of her cluster members, Jonas (Naveen Andrews) befriends and helps them through the process. Meanwhile, the villainous sensate known as "Whispers" (Terrence Mann) attempts to track down and destroy them with the help of the Biological Preservation Organization (BPO), a group hellbent on ridding the world of all sensates.

Why you should binge it

Soon after the cancellation news, Netflix Chief Content Officer Ted Sarandos praised "Sense8" as an "incredibly ambitious" show. Though "the audience was very passionate," however, it "just [wasn't] large enough to support the economics of something that big." After all, the production logged around 100,000 miles of flight time filming in diverse locations like Berlin, Chicago, London, Mexico City, Mumbai, Nairobi, Reykjavík, San Francisco and Seoul. It wasn't cheap.

At the same time, the quantity and quality of the settings, combined with the Wachowski's writing, directing and cinematography, makes for an amazingly beautiful series to watch. What's more, these various locations are amplified by an international swathe of major and supporting characters, performed by an equally diverse cast. The story is engaging on its own, but these aspects make "Sense8" all the more pleasurable to binge.

Meet the cast

A show that centers on a minimum of eight major characters is going to require a big cast, and "Sense8" has one. The sensates are played by Aml Ameen (Capheus in season 1), Toby Onwumere (Capheus in season 2), Doona Bae (Sun Bak), Jamie Clayton (Nomi Marks), Tina Desai (Kala Dandekar), Tuppence Middleton (Riley Blue), Max Riemelt (Wolfgang Bogdanow), Miguel Ángel Silvestre (Lito Rodriguez) and Brian J. Smith (Will Gorski). Along with Mann, Andrews and Hannah, Freema Agyeman and Anupam Kher play supporting characters.

How to binge

The series finale of "Sense8" will be available to stream Friday, June 8 on Netflix. All first and second season episodes, as well as the holiday special, are already available to binge-watch.

Bryan Colangelo, 76ers part ways after Twitter scandal

The Sixers and Bryan Colangelo parted ways on Thursday afternoon due to inappropriate Twitter use. GETTY IMAGES

The Sixers will immediately begin their search for a new general manager.

JOVAN ALFORD
jovan.alford@metro.us

The Philadelphia 76ers announced on Thursday that president of basketball operations Bryan Colangelo resigned after an independent investigation found that his wife owned and operated multiple anonymous Twitter accounts criticizing the organization.

Sixers managing partner Josh Harris released an official statement about the resignation.

"The Philadelphia 76ers organization has accepted the resignation of president of basketball operations Bryan Colangelo, effective immediately. We appreciate Bryan's many contributions during his time leading our basketball operations and thank him for the work he did in positioning the team for long-term success," he said.

Head coach Brett Brown will oversee the team's basketball operations on an interim basis.

Last week, The Ringer published a story on Colangelo's alleged use of burner Twitter accounts. Through cited evidence in their story, the media outlet connected numerous Twitter accounts to Colangelo. However, it was damaging things that were said on the social media site, which were alarming.

The anonymous Twitter accounts in question posted negative things about current Sixers' Joel Embiid and Markelle Fultz, and former Sixers' Jahlil Okafor and Nerlens Noel.

Therefore, the Sixers launched their own independent investigation a couple of days later into Colangelo's alleged social media use. The team hired New York-based law firm Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison LLP to investigate the Twitter accounts.

The law firm released a statement on Thursday, concluding that they do not believe Colangelo established the accounts nor posted on them. However, they found evidence that supported Colangelo's wife, Barbara Bottini, using the multiple accounts in question.

According to the law firm, Bottini admitted to creating and posting on the Twitter accounts in an interview. Forensic evidence backed it up.

"Our investigation revealed substantial evidence that Mr. Colangelo was the source of sensitive, non-public, club- related information contained in certain posts to the Twitter accounts. We believe that Mr. Colangelo was careless and in some instances reckless in failing to properly safeguard sensitive, non-public, club-related information in communications with individuals outside the 76ers organization."

In response to the law firm's statements about his reckless behavior, Colangelo issued a statement, disputing the allegation.

"While I am grateful that the independent investigation conducted by the 76ers has confirmed that I had no knowledge of or involvement in the Twitter activity conducted by my wife, I vigorously dispute the allegation that my conduct was in any way reckless. At no point did I ever purposefully or directly share any sensitive, non-public, club-related information with her," he said.

"Her actions were a seriously misguided effort to publicly defend and support me, and while I recognize how inappropriate these actions were, she acted independently and without my knowledge or consent. Further, the content she shared was filled with inaccuracies and conjecture which in no way represent my own views or opinions. While this was obviously a mistake, we are a family and we will work through this together.

"Although I am not directly responsible for the actions, I regret this incident occurred and understand that it has become a distraction for the team. Therefore, the organization and I have mutually agreed to part ways."

Colangelo, a two-time NBA Executive of the Year, was supposed to be leading the Sixers into a pivotal offseason, where they could acquire a big time free agent.

However, that will now not be the case, as the team will immediately begin their new search for a new general manager.

Who might spoil Justify's Triple Crown party?

Justify goes for a historic Triple Crown in Saturday's Belmont Stakes.

ROBERT CRISCOLA
sports@metro.us

Justify's march toward immortality continues on Saturday when he'll try to join Seattle Slew as the only undefeated Triple Crown winner in history by taking the Belmont Stakes (6:30 p.m., NBC). The Bob Baffert trainee made it look easy in the Kentucky Derby, but he showed some signs of fatigue in the Preakness, winning by a diminishing half-length while seeing a speed figure decrease. Jockey Mike Smith will have to ensure his mount has enough left in the tank, but he seems confident heading into the 1 1/2-mile "Test of the Champion."

"He acts like he should [handle it]," Smith said in a Santa Anita Park press release. "His energy level is good, it's high, he's galloping out very well from his last two races. I don't see why he wouldn't handle it."

Justify, breaking from post one as the 4-5 favorite on the morning-line, will face nine rivals in the Belmont Stakes. Here are the top three contenders with an upset chance.

Justify will be looking to become just the second undefeated horse to win a Triple Crown on Saturday. GETTY IMAGES

HOFBURG (9-2) didn't get the cleanest trip in "the Run for the Roses," steadying twice on the far turn, but he managed to pick off some foes in the stretch while finishing seventh. His pedigree cries out for this distance as he's by Tapit, sire of three of the last four Belmont Stakes winners, out of a mare by Touch Gold, who won this race in 1997. Hofburg hinted at serious ability in the Florida Derby when he ran second to Audible, who grabbed third in the Kentucky Derby but decided to bypass this race. Hofburg makes just his fifth career start, so there's still room for improvement as well. Bill Mott, who won the Belmont in 2010 with Drosselmeyer, keeps Irad Ortiz Jr, who won the 2016 Belmont with Creator, in the saddle.

BRAVAZO (8-1) is the only other colt that will participate in all three legs of the Triple Crown aside from Justify. He was 66-1 in the Derby but outran those odds when placing sixth despite a very wide trip. On an equally muddy track at Pimlico, Bravazo was a close second in the Preakness. However, if there's no significant rainfall in New York on Saturday, it's possible he could take a step back. Bravazo's pedigree doesn't preclude him from getting the distance, as he's by 1998 Breeders' Cup Classic winner Awesome Again out of a Cee's Tizzy (sire of 2000 and 2001 Breeders' Cup Classic winner Tiznow) mare. Four-time Belmont-winning trainer D. Wayne Lukas names Luis Saez, who's having a career year by earnings per start ($13,121), to ride.

BLENDED CITIZEN (15-1) didn't have the credentials to make the Kentucky Derby, but he showed an affinity for this course when taking the 1 1/8-mile Peter Pan Stakes on May 12. However, his ability to get the Belmont distance is less obvious when compared to his competition. His sire, Proud Citizen, was a distant fifth in the 2002 Belmont. Both trainer (Doug O'Neill) and jockey (Kyle Frey) are after their first Belmont triumph.
